ODDITIES OF PAINTINGS.

and Abraham Alming at Isaac with a Pistol.

The great painters of earlier centuries were singularly free from realism.

Raphael depicts Apollo playing the violin, and has a red lobster in his "Miraculous Draught of Fishes." There are, indeed, no lobsters in the Sea of Galilice. A well-known Dutch painter shows us Abraham preparing to sacrifice his son by blowing our his brains with a pistol. In another Dutch picture one of the Wise Men is rep The great painters of earlier centuries resented offering to the Divine Infant a model of a Dutch man-of-war.

Durer painted Adam and Eve expelled with days of the parden by an angel in a dress from the garden by an angel in a dress trimmed with flounces. Ucello, wishing to represent a chameleon, makes it a mar-vellous heast, half camel, half lion. In a famous picture of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, we see in the background a hunter in full costume shooting ducks. Paul Veronese places several Benedictine monks among the priests at the marriage in Cana. Tintoretto represents the Israelites gathering manna armed with guus, Poussin has a picture of St. Jerome seated in front of a clock.

London makes a splendld showing in the matter of public parks. Within the fivemile radius of Charing Cross there are no less than fifty-three ground areas, apart from cemeteries, square gardens and private grounds, nearly the whole of them greatly xceeding twenty acres in extent (Regent's TO STOP NERVE WASTE through Park, with 450 acres, being the biggest), representing a total of about 4,246 acres, being an average of over eighty acres each, TO STRENGTHEN Weak Organs, Immediately beyond this radius stretch the TO INDUCE Natural Manly Vigor. vast spaces of Richmond Park, Wimbledon TO CHECK all excesses. Common, Greenwich Park, Blackheath and the Crystal Palace. Within the four-mile TO LIVE in full vigor to the oldest age, radius, the space occupied by the Thames, cemeteries, churchyards, canals, square-gardens, recreation grounds, represent 7,975 acres out of a total area of 32,163 acres. In other words, the "lung spaces" of London approximate very closely upon 25 per cent of its total area. Within threequarters of a square mile in Bloomsbury there are sixteen spacious sources and other spaces, aggregating about seventyeight acres, or a sixth of the whole.
